Winners Abound in OG&E, Smith Contract Approval

Electric customers, Dayton plant, Oklahoma economy benefit from OCC action

OKLAHOMA CITY — OG&E Electric Services applauded the Oklahoma Corporation Commission's approval today of the company's new power supply contract with PowerSmith Cogeneration.

We're happy to reach today's approval, said OG&E spokesman Brian Alford. It was the culmination of a lot of hard work and tough, thoughtful negotiations. We believe the Commissioners' decision demonstrates the excellent leadership this state has in business and government alike, and the mutual commitment to do what's in the best interest of Oklahoma.

Alford said that today's Commission action will help ensure OG&E's electric customers save approximately $30 million over the life of the new 15-year contract. It also represents a major step toward preserving 1,800 jobs and the $800 million annual impact on Oklahoma's economy created by the Dayton Tire facility, which is located adjacent to the Smith power plant.

The contract allows PowerSmith to continue supplying Dayton the steam used in its tire manufacturing process. It also benefits OG&E's customers with lower costs and sustained reliability of electric service, and benefits PowerSmith Cogeneration by keeping its Oklahoma City power plant operating.

We recognize that the Commissioners have a responsibility to serve the best interests of our entire state and it is often difficult to find solutions to the complex issues they face, Alford said. The contract they approved today creates a win-win solution for our customers, Dayton Tire, PowerSmith and our state's economy.

OG&E's existing contract with Smith expires Aug. 31.

OG&E, a subsidiary of OGE Energy Corp. (NYSE: OGE) serves approximately 728,000 customers in a service territory spanning 30,000 square miles in Oklahoma and western Arkansas.
