PART III NARRATIVE

State below in reasonable detail why Forms 10-K, 20-F, 11-K, 10-Q, 10-D, N-SAR, N-CSR, or the transition report or portion thereof, could not be filed within the prescribed time period.

On July 27, 2005, The AES Corporation (The Company) announced via press release that it would file an amended 2004 Form 10-K and an amended first quarter 2005 Form 10-Q restating all periods presented.

On August 11, 2005 the Company filed a Form 12b-25 notification of late filing for the Form 10-Q for the period ended June 30, 2005.

The restatement adjustments in large part were a result of errors in the Company's accounting for deferred taxes. The review included deferred taxes associated with certain acquisitions completed prior to 2001, foreign currency remeasurement of deferred tax balances in certain subsidiaries where the U.S. dollar is the functional currency, and the reconciliation of income tax returns to deferred tax balances. In addition, restatement adjustments will be made for consolidation, acquisition and translation accounting errors related to certain subsidiaries that were identified during the restatement process.

The errors principally affect the income statement through changes in depreciation and amortization (included in cost of sales), foreign currency transaction gains or losses, interest expense, income tax expense, asset impairment expense, goodwill impairment expense, minority interest expense and income from operations of discontinued businesses. Principal balance sheet accounts affected include deferred tax assets and liabilities, property, plant and equipment, reclassifications between cash and short term investments, goodwill, deferred financing costs, minority interest and total stockholder's equity.

The accounting research includes a review of historical records and transactions globally at many of the Company's businesses and in some cases going back to 1999. The Company currently is finalizing the deferred tax adjustments needed to complete the restatement and its financial results.

Yes No

Form 10-Q for the quarterly period ended June 30, 2005
Form 10-Q for the quarterly period ended September 30, 2005

(3) Is it anticipated that any significant change in results of operations from the corresponding period for the last fiscal year will be reflected by the earnings statements to be included in the subject report or portion thereof?

Yes No

The restatement adjustments in large part were a result of errors in the Company's accounting for deferred taxes. The review included deferred taxes associated with certain acquisitions completed prior to 2001, foreign currency remeasurement of deferred tax balances in certain subsidiaries where the U.S. dollar is the functional currency, and the reconciliation of income tax returns to deferred tax balances. In addition, restatement adjustments will be made for consolidation, acquisition and translation accounting errors related to certain subsidiaries that were identified during the restatement process.

The errors principally affect the income statement through changes in depreciation and amortization (included in cost of sales), foreign currency transaction gains or losses, interest expense, income tax expense, asset impairment expense, goodwill impairment expense, minority interest expense and income from operations of discontinued businesses. Principal balance sheet accounts affected include deferred tax assets and liabilities, property, plant and equipment, together with reclassifications between cash and short term investments, goodwill, deferred financing costs, minority interest and total stockholder's equity.

The accounting research includes a review of historical records and transactions globally at many of the Company's global businesses and in some cases going back to 1999. The Company currently is finalizing the deferred tax adjustments needed to complete the restatement and its financial results.

If so, attach an explanation of the anticipated change, both narratively and quantitatively, and, if appropriate, state the reasons why a reasonable estimate of the results cannot be made.
