The Company further improved its information disclosure, and will disclose its annual embedded value for the first time in its 2004 annual report. As at 31 December 2004, the Company's embedded value was RMB90,073 million. Its value of one year's sales for the year ended 31 December 2004 was RMB6,504 million.

The Company declared no final dividend for the year.

For the year ended 31 December 2004, China Life's net profit amounted to RMB7,171 million, an increase of 22.4% from 2003, primarily driven by continuous growth in net written premiums and policy fees, and increase in net investment income. Earnings per share was RMB0.27. The Company's total revenue amounted to RMB76,806 million, a 27.1% increase over the previous year. The Company declared no final dividend for the year.

Commenting on the Company's annual results for the year ending 31 December 2004, Mr. Wang Xianzhang, Chairman of the Board and President of China Life, said: "Thanks to the hard work of our employees, we sustained our growth in premiums, and at the same time optimized our business mix, thereby strengthening our long-term earnings growth potential. During the year, we further enhanced our leading position in the mainland life insurance market, and made progress in enhancing internal controls and information disclosure, thereby improving our corporate governance."

Steady growth in premiums

The Company's net premiums earned and policy fees increased by 28.0% from 2003 to RMB65,008 million, primarily due to an increase in net premiums earned from the individual life insurance, group life insurance, and accident and health insurance businesses, offset in part by a decrease in policy fees from the individual life insurance business.

Of the total net premiums earned in 2004, RMB 2,780 million was attributable to single premium products, down 38.9% from 2003. RMB 47,670 million was attributable to regular premium products (including both first year and renewal premiums), up 46.2% from 2003.

Net premiums earned from risk-type participating products were RMB 22,363 million, up 66.7% from RMB 13,417 million in 2003, mainly driven by sales growth of Hong Xin endowment product. Policy fees decreased from RMB 5,557 million in 2003 to RMB 5,194 million in 2004, down 6.5%. This was primarily due to the decreased sales of investment-type products in the individual life insurance business. Policy fees from the individual life insurance business decreased by 10.9% to RMB 4,796 million.

Net premiums earned and policy fees from the individual life insurance business increased by 29.8%, from RMB 42,288 million in 2003 to RMB 54,902 million in 2004. This increase was primarily due to increases in sales of endowment products and whole life products, offset in part by a reduction in policy fees, as a result of the adjustment of our sales strategy to concentrate more on risk-type products and regular premium products.

Net premiums earned and policy fees from the group life insurance business increased by 71.8% to RMB 742 million in 2004 from RMB 432 million in 2003, primarily due to an increase in sales of investment-type products, which led to a growth in policy fees, as well as an increase in sales of whole-life insurance products.

Net premiums earned from the accident and health insurance businesses increased from RMB 8,087 million in 2003 to RMB 9,364 million in 2004, up 15.8%, primarily due to the Company's increased sales efforts for short-term products, as well as an increase in sales of our long-term products with short-term riders.

Further increase in investment income

Net investment income increased by 66.7%, from RMB 6,790 million in 2003 to RMB 11,317 million in 2004. The Company's investment assets continued to grow as its business rapidly expanded. At the end of 2004, total investment assets amounted to RMB 374,890 million, a 34.3% increase from RMB 279,248 million as of the end of 2003. Investment yield for 2004 was 3.5%, higher than 3.4% in 2003.

Edgar Filing: CHINA LIFE INSURANCE CO LTD - Form 6-K

Net realized losses on investment was RMB 237 million in 2004, compared with net realized gains of RMB 599 million in 2003. The Company recorded net realized losses of RMB 317 million on debt securities, which was primarily due to the impairment of bonds entrusted with Min Fa Securities Limited Company. In 2004, the net realized gains on securities investment funds was RMB 80 million.

The Company reflects unrealized gains or losses on investments designated as trading in current period income. The net unrealized losses on investments was RMB 1,061 million in 2004, including net unrealized gains of RMB 11 million on debt securities and net unrealized losses on securities investment funds of RMB 1,072 million, due to a deep fall in the securities market in 2004. The net unrealized gains for 2003 was RMB 254 million.

The Company continued to implement a relatively prudent investment strategy while its investment assets grew. Following the interest rate increase by the central bank, it adjusted its investment portfolio by allocating larger portions of new investments and transferring part of the existing investments into debt securities that offered higher and more stable returns. The Company also optimized its portfolio by lowering the proportion of term deposits.

Business mix optimized

The Company further optimized its business mix in 2004 by increasing contributions from the more profitable risk-type business. The proportion of regular premium to the total premium was also increased to enhance the long-term earnings growth potential.

In 2004, the Company stepped up its sales efforts in risk-type participating products. At the same time, the Company effectively utilized revenues from risk-type and regular premium products as two of the key yardsticks in the evaluation of performance of branches, thereby driving the adjustment in business mix. The result was a significant increase in first-year gross written premiums of risk-type products (including first year premiums of long-term health insurance products, but excluding premiums of accident insurance and short-term health insurance products) by 49.5% over 2003 to RMB 20,195 million in 2004. The proportion of regular gross written premiums in first-year gross written premiums also increased from 66.3% in 2003 to 86.2% in 2004.

Annual embedded value

The Company will disclose its annual embedded value for the first time in its 2004 annual report. As at December 31, 2004, the Company's annual embedded value was RMB 90,073 million. For the year ended December 31, 2004, the Company's value of one year's sales was RMB 6,504 million, indicating that the new businesses generated during the year created value for shareholders.

These figures provide information for investors to further understand the business condition of the Company. The embedded value is the sum of adjusted net worth and value of in-force business, which is the total amount of distributable earnings, in present value terms, that can be expected to emerge over time, in accordance with the assumptions used. The value of one year's sales provides an indication of the value being created for investors by new business activities, and hence an indication of the potential for future business growth. For a complete description of the methodology used in calculating embedded value, including assumptions and estimates used, see the Company's annual report.

Market leader position strengthened

The Company further harnessed its leading position in the market during the year by leveraging on its strong brand, expanding sales channels and improving customer service. Its share of China's life insurance market increased from 45% in 2003 to 47% in 2004.

During the year, the Company further expanded its sales channels. The number of individual agents reached 668,000, serving customers from 9,300 field offices. The performance-driven appraisal measures the Company adopted effectively drove up its sales growth. Meanwhile, the Company stepped up its training efforts to enhance the quality of the individual agents and raise the proportion of agents that hold qualified certificates.

The Company's direct sales force expanded to over 12,000 representatives, an increase of 20% from 2003, operating out of the extensive network of branches nationwide. The Company also developed a training system for the direct sales force. On the bancassurance front, the Company stepped up its efforts in the utilization of bank branches and postal savings outlets as product distribution channels. At the end of 2004, the number of these sales outlets reached 87,000. The Company also started the establishment of its team of client service managers. At the end of 2004, the number of client service managers surpassed 12,000.

Internal control enhanced

The Company further enhanced its internal control mechanism. In addition to the establishment of Audit Committee and Risk Management Committee under the Board of Directors, it also formed an Internal Control Committee under management level. Audit Department and Risk Management Department, two new departments responsible for internal control functions, were also formed. The Company also established an internal auditing system with vertical and unified management.

In addition, the Company mandated an international accounting firm as its consultant for the enhancement of internal control system both in the headquarters and its branches nationwide, to prepare for the implementation of Section 404 of Sarbanes Oxley Act in the United States.

2005 Outlook

The business environment in 2005 is expected to be full of both opportunities and challenges. Steady growth in the macro economy is expected to continue, while the investment channels for insurance funds will be further expanded following the implementation of the policy that allows direct investments in the mainland stock market. However, the full opening up of the insurance market implies a more competitive environment going forward.

Commenting on the 2005 business outlook, Mr. Wang Xianzhang said, "In a business environment with both opportunities and challenges, we will continue to optimize our business mix, enhance our profitability and maintain our business growth. While further improving investment returns and the asset-liability match, we will continue to strengthen our internal control and cost controls, raise our management standards, and progress towards our goal of establishing ourselves as a world-class life insurance company."
