Video Spotlight Series Ted Van Horne & American Medical Response

TO: All Envision Healthcare & AMSURG Team Members

Our Spotlight Video Series continues with an introduction to Ted Van Horne and Envision Healthcare's Medical Transportation business line, American Medical Response (AMR). As previously announced, upon completion of the proposed merger Ted will continue in his role as President & CEO of AMR, reporting to Randy Owen who we profiled last week.

In his video, Ted gives us insight to his decades-long service in healthcare, beginning as a paramedic, and how his passion has defined his career. We also share an overview of AMR and its many companies that are helping people in communities from coast to coast and some around the world.

Questions & Answers with Ted Van Horne

[Ted]: We can affect a patient's life in so many different ways, our AMR crews are on the front lines every day. It's a pride, I think a passion of having been a paramedic, and then also being able to be a leader with that group. I'm Ted Van Horne; I'm President & CEO of American Medical Response.

Why did you go into Emergency Medical Services?

[Ted]: Well, actually I went to school initially for industrial design and engineering, went to Rochester Institute of Technology. In my senior year had an incident, in which ah was really the last thesis program, I was designing a bubble boat and at ah three in the morning an ambulance call went out for a person down in the quad. On my way out the door, I ah, hit my ah, project accidentally, didn't even know about it until later on. Actually got a D on the project because I was out there trying to resuscitate a person that had ah jumped off the building actually. The professor flat out said, this is not what you love doing, what you love doing is that ambulance thing, and ah you need to do that instead of this, cause that's what your passion is. And that's really what got me into healthcare, was that defining moment, that one night at three in the morning.

What is American Medical Response?

[Ted]: We're proud to be the largest community ambulance service in the U.S. We have a large air ambulance program, also we do fire services across the U.S., large bit of managed transportation where we're doing brokerage work, moving patients and wheelchair patients into sedans to doctor's appointments, and then the core mission really is the paramedic 911 services in communities all across the U.S., over 40 states, transporting nearly 5 million patients a year on just the ambulance side. Multiple million more on the brokeraged managed transportation. My kids know, and ya know, they ah don't say an ambulance, they call it AMR. And that's I think where we're really driving the culture at AMR is that when you think of EMS and when you think of high performance systems, the word is AMR. It's less about ambulances. That's who we are as a company and that's what our passion is.

American Medical Response Overview

[Voiceover]: AMR is the nation's largest private medical transportation organization, with 30,000 paramedics, EMTs, nurses, communication professionals and support team members who cared for patients over 4.4 million times in 2015.

[Voiceover]: In small communities and major metropolitan areas across the country, AMR clinicians and support team members provide 911 medical response, inter-facility transportation including contracts with regional and national health systems and managed transportation.

[Voiceover]: AMR also delivers event medical services for large public events and sports venues, world-wide air ambulance coverage, protects millions of people through Rural Metro Fire and is FEMA's prime contractor for EMS coordination and response services most recently being activated to assist during and after Hurricane Matthew. In collaboration with our first responder partners, AMR is often on-scene at mass-casualty incidents such as the recent shootings in San Bernardino, Dallas and at Pulse Nightclub.

[Voiceover]: Through its dedication to practicing evidenced-based medicine, particularly focused on the 7 things that matter, AMR clinicians have been able to definitively document that their practice delivers better outcomes for patients. One example is the AMR survival-to-hospital discharge rate. AMR communities achieved an 11.3% cardiac arrest survival rate compared to 10.6% in non-AMR communities participating in the CARES Registry in 2015.

[Voiceover]: In partnership with its Envision Healthcare sister companies EmCare and Evolution Health, AMR has also expanded beyond its traditional clinical and logistical expertise to become the nation's largest provider of Mobile Integrated Healthcare and value-based solutions to communities and healthcare partners.

[Voiceover]: AMR's deep connection to the local communities it serves is shown through its many philanthropic ventures, including funding research and academic initiatives through the AMR Foundation for Research and Education.

[Voiceover]: Now in its 5th year, AMR caregivers have trained over 250,000 people in Compression Only CPR during a national one-day effort.

[Voiceover]: In 2017, AMR will partner with the International Association of Fire Chiefs with a record setting goal of training one million people during one week in May. These numbers make AMR the second largest American Heart Association Training Center in the world.

[Voiceover]: AMR also gives back through Home for the Holidays, allowing critically ill patients the opportunity to attend family celebrations, Sentimental Journey, which enables patients near the end of their lives to participate in transformative experiences, and many other programs.

[Voiceover]: The men and women of AMR are proud to be America's largest local ambulance provider whose team members are making a difference by caring for people in need every day.

[Voiceover]: We love making a positive difference in people's lives and the communities we're privileged to serve.
