Clarence Otis

Good morning, everyone. And we do welcome this opportunity to speak with you and take your questions, but before turning to questions, I'd like to briefly address the consent solicitation that's underway to call a special meeting of Darden shareholders to consider a non-binding resolution prior to our annual meeting. Our board is strongly committed to engagement. We value the views of our shareholders, and as many of you know, we've had a robust Investor Relations effort since becoming a public company nearly 19 years ago.

We've consistently spent and will continue to spend an extensive amount of time talking directly with our shareholders, and with the investment community. In terms of our more recent business circumstances and potential paths forward, we appreciate the input we've received, and these insights are reflected in the plans that we've announced.

Given the significance of the initiatives under way at Darden, we believe it's important that we continue engaging with our shareholders directly and individually, so that we receive input in a productive and nuanced manner.

With respect to the consent solicitation, shareholders should make their own determination. Given our extensive ongoing discussions with shareholders, and the substantial value we've gleaned from those conversations, we believe that shareholders should continue to engage directly with the company, and should not view a special meeting as a substitute for that ongoing two-way engagement.

We look forward to continuing to speak with our shareholders, and with the investment community. And with that, operator, we'll take some questions.
