SUPERVISION AND REGULATION

The Company is subject to supervision and regulation by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (the Federal Reserve Board). As a financial holding company, the Company may engage in activities that are financial in nature or incidental to a financial activity, as authorized by the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act of 1999 (The Financial Services Reform Act). Under the Financial Services Reform Act, the Company may continue to claim the benefits of financial holding company status as long as each depository institution that it controls remains well capitalized and well managed. The Company is required to provide notice to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System when it becomes aware that any depository institution controlled by the Company ceases to be well capitalized or well managed. Furthermore, current regulation specifies that prior to initiating or engaging in any new activities that are authorized for financial holding companies, the Company's insured depository institutions must be rated satisfactory or better under the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA). As of December 31, 2006, the Company's bank subsidiary was rated satisfactory for CRA purposes, and remained well capitalized and, in management's opinion, well managed. Cortland Bancorp owns no property. Operations are conducted at 194 West Main Street, Cortland, Ohio.

The Bank, as a state chartered banking organization and member of the Federal Reserve System, is subject to periodic examination and regulation by both the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland and the State of Ohio Division of Financial Institutions. These examinations, which include such areas as capital, liquidity, asset quality, management practices and other aspects of the Bank's operations, are primarily for the protection of the Bank's depositors. In addition to these regular examinations, the Bank must furnish periodic reports to regulatory authorities containing a full and accurate statement of its affairs. The Bank's deposits are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) up to the statutory limit of $100,000 per customer. Individual Retirement Account deposits are insured by the FDIC to $250,000 per customer.

General (Continued)

On July 30, 2002, President Bush signed into law the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, which contains important new requirements for public companies in the area of financial disclosure and corporate governance. In accordance with section 302(a) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, written certifications by the Company's Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer are required. These certifications attest that the Company's quarterly and annual reports filed with the SEC do not contain any untrue statement of a material fact or omit to state a material fact. The Company has also implemented a program designed to comply with Section 404 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, which includes the identification of significant processes and accounts, documentation of the design of control effectiveness over process and entity level controls, and testing of the operating effectiveness of key controls.

Item 1A. Risk Factors

The material risks and uncertainties that management believes affect the Company are described below. Before making an investment decision with respect to the Company's stock, you should carefully consider the risks and uncertainties as described below together with all of the information included herein. The risks and uncertainties described below are not the only risks and uncertainties the Company faces. Additional risks and uncertainties not presently known and that are deemed immaterial also may have a material adverse effect on the Company's result of operations and financial condition. If any of the following risks actually occur, the Company's common stock could decline.

Fluctuations in interest rates could adversely affect the Company's earnings and financial condition.

As is the case for most financial institutions, the Company's earnings are substantially dependent upon net interest income, which is the difference between (a) the rates earned on loans, securities and other earning assets and (b) the interest rates paid on borrowings and deposits. These interest rates are highly sensitive to various factors beyond the Banks control, including but not limited to:

the general economic conditions;

governmental monetary policy;

regulatory policies;

rate of inflation;

rate of unemployment.

For instance, an economic downturn, increase in unemployment, or higher interest rates could decrease the demand for loans and other products and services and/or result in a deterioration in credit quality and/or loan performance.

The Company's business may be adversely affected by changes in government policies.

The Company operates as a State Chartered Financial Institution and is subject to the Banking regulations of the Ohio Department of Commerce and the Division of Financial Institutions. The Company is also a member of the Federal Reserve Banks 6th District. As such, the Company's success depends not only on competitive factors but also on regulations that are issued by these organizations. Congress and state legislatures and federal and state regulatory agencies continually review and change banking laws, regulations and policies. Changes to statutes, regulations or regulatory policies, including changes in interpretation or implementations of statutes, regulations or policies, could affect the Company in substantial and unpredictable ways, with the potential to significantly impact the Company's cost structure. Also, the Company's failure to comply with laws, regulations or policies could result in sanctions by the regulatory agencies and damage its reputation.

The Company's earnings and reputation may be adversely affected by credit risk.

A significant portion of the Company's loan portfolio is secured by real property. Originating and underwriting loans properly are integral to the Company's success. Credit risk is the risk of not being able to collect the contractual obligation, including all principal and interest income when the borrower is unable to repay the obligation as agreed. Credit risk could be affected by a variety of negative conditions, including, (1) general, regional or local economic conditions, (2) rapid increase in interest rates, and/or (3) a downturn in an industry sector.

The Company's general and specific credit risk are significant components of the Company's reserve for loan losses which is also based upon, among other things:

historical experience;

economic conditions;

regular reviews of delinquencies and loan portfolio quality;

industry concentrations;

and results of regulatory examinations.

Based upon such factors, management makes various assumptions and judgments about the ultimate collectibility of the respective loan portfolios. Although the Company believes that the reserve for loan losses is adequate, there can be no assurance that such reserve will prove sufficient to cover future losses. These determinations are based upon estimates that are inherently subjective. As such, future adjustments will be necessary if economic conditions change or adverse developments arise with respect to nonperforming or performing loans or if regulatory supervision changes. Material losses would result in a material decrease in the Company's net income, and possibly its capital, and could result in the inability to pay dividends, among other adverse conditions.

The Company's industry is very competitive and intense.

The Bank competes with a variety of competition including: other commercial banks, savings and loan associations, finance companies, insurance companies, brokerage and investment banking firms and credit unions. Many of these competitors have greater resources and lending limits than the Bank and may offer certain services that the Bank does not provide. The Company's profitability depends upon the continued ability to compete effectively in our markets with the Company's core products.

The Company's business could be adversely affected by a downturn in the local geographic markets where we operate and depend.

The Bank derives the majority of its loans and deposits from the communities located in Northeast Ohio region. The local economic conditions in these areas have a significant impact on the generation of the Bank's loan and deposit portfolios; the ability of borrowers to repay these loans; and the value of collateral securing these loans. Adverse changes in the economic conditions of the Northeast Ohio region in general could result in a negative impact on the financial results of the Company's operations and have a negative effect on our profitability.

A significant challenge for the future of the Company is recruiting and retaining top talent.

In the Company's competitive market, success will be determined in large part by who can hire and retain the best talent. Finding and retaining high performance employees is a particular challenge for banks in the Company's core market of Northeast Ohio.

International conflicts and terrorism could adversely impact the Company's earnings and operations.

The potential for terrorist activity is unpredictable and could negatively impact general and economic conditions in the United States and the Bank's local economy in particular. The impact of such terrorism could have a significant adverse impact to the Company's earnings and operations in ways that cannot be anticipated and/or estimated.

The Company's stock price is volatile.

The Company's stock price has been volatile in the past, and several factors could cause the price to fluctuate substantially in the future. These factors include:

Actual or anticipated variations in earnings;

Changes in analysts recommendations or projections;

Operating and stock performance of other companies deemed to be peers;

News reports of trends, concerns and other issues related to the financial services industry;

Low volume of stock trades.

The Bank's stock price may fluctuate significantly in the future, and these fluctuations may be unrelated to the Bank's performance. General market price declines or market volatility in the future could adversely affect the price of the Bank's stock, and the current market price may not be indicative of future market prices.

Further information relating to Item 1A. Risk Factors is set forth in the Corporation's 2006 Annual Report to Shareholders Management's Discussion Analysis. Including but not limited to Page 34, Note regarding Forward-Looking Statements; pages 45-46, Loan Loss Experience; pages 58-59, Market Risk; pages 59-60, Critical Accounting Policies and page 60, Impact of Inflation, and incorporated herein by reference.
